WANT CLOSED SEASON

Not for years has there been such a scarcity of rabbits and birds at this season as the report from lower parts of the State.

Heretofore gunners who went out hunting the first week averaged about four rabbits and double that quantity of birds a day, but this season it is far below normal and the average of one rabbit and two birds seems to be the minimum.

Those most successful state that most of the rabbits are concealed in the fields among the high grass, in fact those who are hunting in the fields have been lately posted notices in their fields.

The sportsmen through the country are talking very seriously at present of having a law introduced that no game be killed for at least one year and if it can be made two years it will prove more satisfactory to some. They state that at present there is not enough game this year to make a gunning expedition encouraging and if the coming winter proves to be a severe one there will be but very few more birds and rabbits next season and that a year's rest would certainly be great benefit. The shortage in game is also attributed to the large number of worthless dogs that scour the woods in the summer and kill the young rabbits.
